Middle East Daily Briefing

This document lists all sources referred to in the daily briefings, compiled from every brief published since June 4, 2026. It is grouped by the perspective each source represents, since the briefing methodology weighs corroboration across perspectives, not just the number of outlets. Update this file only when a new source enters the rotation.

9. Occasionally Cited (Low Weight)

These have appeared in past briefs but carry low evidentiary weight on their own. They are used only when corroborated or clearly labeled as perspective: Common Dreams, The Daily Caller, The New Republic, Washington Times, Military.com, Express Tribune (Pakistan), Sunday Guardian Live (India), MS NOW.

Reliability Tiers Used in Confidence Ratings

- Tier 1 (anchor): Reuters, AP, AFP, BBC, Bloomberg, exchange/market data. A claim carried by two or more of these starts at High confidence.
- Tier 2 (strong): Major broadsheets and networks (NYT, WaPo, Guardian, CNN, NBC, CBS, NPR, CNBC), Al Jazeera, Times of Israel, Haaretz, The National. High confidence when two or more corroborate across different perspectives.
- Tier 3 (perspective): State media (Press TV, SANA, CGTN, Anadolu), government statements, advocacy leaning outlets (Middle East Monitor, Israel National News, FDD), OSINT maps. Claims sourced only here are capped at Medium and attributed in text.
- Data providers (Kpler, ACLED, Trading Economics) are treated as single source Medium unless the number is confirmed by a second provider or official release.
- Primary institutional sources (CENTCOM, IMO, IAEA, UKMTO, BOK, MOTIE, IEA, EIA, OPEC production tables) are authoritative for the institution's own statements, decisions, and published data — a CENTCOM strike announcement is High for "CENTCOM announced X." They are NOT authoritative for contested facts (battle damage, adversary intent), which stay capped at Medium until independently corroborated.
